Sarah's midwife skills are the last line of defense for women with nowhere else to turn. She prides herself in the complete trust the women have in her. She would never betray one of her vulnerable charges.

Reynald, a Templar knight, thunders into her world, demanding detailed information about her patients. Sarah, outraged at his arrogance, absolutely refuses to help him in any way.

When wolves' heads begin threatening the region, Sarah realizes that Reynald's mission is one of critical importance. Soon it is a race against time to defeat the bandits before they destroy all she has worked to keep safe.

All author's proceeds from sales of the Sword of Glastonbury series benefit battered women's shelters.

Trusting in Faith is book five in the Sword of Glastonbury series. Each novel ends in a happily ever after, which then leads into the next book in the series. Each of these full-length romances features its own flavor, atmosphere, and main characters. Each is set in a different part of medieval England and showcases the natural beauty of its region. Trusting in Faith is set near Bath, in southwest England.

Trusting in Faith is a heartfelt tale of overcoming prejudices and learning to trust, in the style of Jane Austen's Pride and Prejudice. It is suitable for teens and older. It does not feature any strong language nor scenes of intimacy.
