As a 17 year juvenile, Burq was conscious that Hindus, in undivided India, were educated, well-trained to British colonies and prosperous. The Muslim masses on the other hand were mostly uneducated, engaged in labor and busy with rituals. This made him self-critical. As he grew older and got educated, he realized that Qur'an was a great miracle dawned on the Prophet in the Arabian esert. He got down to research and realized that key to success was in the first sentences – READ and WRITE. Dr. Burq served as a lecturer in various colleges and wrote 29 books including the masterpiece "Two Qur'ans" – one that is in the hearts of the Muslims and practiced, and the other that is ignored.
