Worshipping God is not a task or a chore, it is an art that expresses creativity of the heart and mind. Worship art entails so much and reminds us it's important to approach God with freshness, blessing Him with the creativity He gave us. We can tell Him this in our song, dance, design, tapestry and even photography! God is not limited, let's stop limiting Him! Author Clarissa S. Stroud challenges true worshipers with her latest book, Louder Than. She reminds us that we have the tools, talent and creativity to give God what he deserves, which is undeniable worship from the creative chambers of our hearts. What is acceptable? How do we "refresh" our gifts? Stroud emphasizes that these questions cannot be answered or addressed without conversation. New ideas cannot be birthed, and understanding cannot take place without real conversation. The mind and heart must be used to their fullest potential and worship art provides that platform to make it happen. Louder Than provides unique insight into the many elements that are missing in today's worship, starting with healthy dialogue that should take place among worshipers. From those conversations can come direction, unity and most of all, a refreshed appreciation for God and all that He has done.
