Dust jacket notes: "Few are the people who have not read and reread A Christmas Carol, but there are many fewer still who have been able to look over Charles Dickens' shoulder to see how he created one of the greatest stories of all times. This edition carries a 300-line screen facsimile of each manuscript page in its original size, and facing it, a transcript from the first edition. The illustrations of John Leech that adorned the first edition are reproduced as they first appeared, some black and white, and some in full color. Monica Dickens, the author's great-granddaughter, a noted author herself, has written the introduction especially for this edition. Frederick B. Adams, Jr., the librarian of the Pierpont Morgan Library, which owns the manuscript, writes the exciting story of the manuscript in the preface. A Christmas Carol is a book for adults and children; for collectors, bibliophiles and scholars; for all those who enjoy giving presents to friends, relatives and even to themselves; and for all those to whom Christmas is dear."
