Reports (American Poetry Series) Kathryn Levy

Reports deals with the many voices that echo through our lives--the often overwhelming news from the public sphere, the unrelenting voices from the past, "a book of stories / you can't stop reading," and those dreamlike, ambiguous voices that haltingly search for language, to find expression for what can never be fully expressed.

Advance Praise:

"The poems in Kathryn Levy's Reports burn and shine. They track fire-lit paths through the dark interiors of our murky cultural mythologies . . . From start to finish, this is a breathless and necessary collection. Reading it, I felt at times outside of myself, wholly inhabited by Levy's terrifying, thrilling monologues and dreamscapes. Yet, for the horror--and this is what I find most admirable in this book that offers much to admire--Reports refuses despair."

--Joe Wilkins, author of Notes from the Journey Westward
