The year 1929 was a special moment in the annals of Colorado sports history. In that magic year, a group of high school boys from the unknown and unlikely town of Joes, caught the attention not only of their state, but of the nation, when they captured the state championship and swept on to the national finals in Chicago. The team represented half the entire male student body and the coach had never played the game - he learned from a book! Though their accomplishments took place on a basketball court, The Boys From Joes is really more than an athletic triumph, it is a story of human achievement that stands as a testimonial to hard work, desire and dedication.
