God Is, Here, Now Peter Luscombe

Space-time in its entirety, including every individual, is superimposed upon God, like a film-show including every actor, is superimposed upon the screen. The author describes how he became aware of God (or the screen) through his own efforts and experience. God is not in space-time (the screen is not in the film-show) and therefore cannot be seen or described. Awareness is attained only through union (oneness). The author was influenced and guided by reading and references to scientific, philosophical and scriptural sources of knowledge (the book is also an act of homage to 'The Bhagavad-Gita'). The author requests you take the title 'God Is, Here, Now' as a hypothesis and then put it to the test.
